BEST BET: Race 6 - #4 Elvenses

This filly will probably be one of the shortest prices of the day, but it just seems like she keeps getting better. Not to mention, she has already been exposed against stakes competition before. Elvenses broke her maiden at first asking on a sloppy track at Aqueduct in November before a disappointing effort in the Glitter Woman in January. The addition of blinkers and Lasix last time out seemed to help and she won very impressively. She should sit a good trip today.

LONGSHOT: Race 10 - #5 Gran Togoshi

This colt will likely be overlooked with the presence of some top barns in the race. While he was beaten as the favorite in his debut, Gran Togoshi had a legitimate excuse with trouble at the start that compromised him early on. He made a nice physical impression to me on that day, and was flattered when Belle Tapisserie came back to win. I'm looking for an improved effort out of this son of Violence today.
