BEST BET: Race 8 - #2 Two Step Blues

Although she hasn't won since May, this filly is very consistent and returns to the track where she has shown more early speed in the past. Tactically, I think she should be able to be forwardly placed in here and just off the rail runner Mi Cuaima. Two Step Blues had a world of trouble last time out, with being wide on the first turn and then having her momentum shut off in the stretch. She looks well spotted today.

LONGSHOT: Race 7 - #1 Watschen

I have been waiting for this horse to stretch out in distance again and to get some experience under his belt. I like to see that Julien Leparoux has the call today, and that this Tapit colt had a recent 7 furlong work in preparation for this race. Although beautifully bred, he will have his work cut out for him with some other tough contenders in this race, but should be a good price with a real chance.
